There is a plaque in front of the church which reads as follows:

The Church of the Immaculate Conception

This monumental Gothic church, erected on a commanding site overlooking Formosa, was built to serve a thriving German Catholic parish. Begun in 1875, it was constructed around and over an earlier log building. Work proceeded intermittently with volunteer labour until 1883 when the old church was finally dismantled and the new structure completed.

Designed by the prominent Ontario architect, Joseph Connolly and built of locally quarried stone, the church is distinguished by its simple form, boldly-modelled tower and fine spire. Intricate Gothic style altars carved by Nicholas Dürrer, a local craftsman and parishoner, grace the superb interior. Restored and renovated in 1974-75, the Church of the Immaculate Conception remains the focal point of the village and a religious centre for the surrounding area.
